local area

The Dordogne-Perigord has long since been a favourite place for holidaymakers to purchase a second home, and for good reason. Blessed by a geography, climate and unique history which set it apart, this is a land made for leisurely exploration. Perhaps you'll take a boat trip along the lazily meandering Dordogne River, past fairytale chateaux and terraced gardens. Maybe you'll stop en route to explore the valley of Vézère, the home of prehistory in Europe, with the caves at Lascaux an unquestionable highlight. It's the limestone in the Dordogne that has given the region its lattice-work of caves and grottoes – best seen at the fabulous caves of Grand Roc, with its entrance half-way up a vertical cliff-face! Food is fantastic here and you'll have no trouble finding a superb meal in any of the pretty villages, such as Villereal, the medieval "bastide" village close to the park with its arcaded market square where restaurateurs source the freshest fruit and vegetables, cheeses, cured hams, and foie gras. Domme, with its rocky cliff-top location overlooking the Dordogne valley, is also home to a flourishing market. For a vision of even loftier living, head to the Château at Beynac, which commands a magnificent view across the valleys and castle-studded hills of the Dordogne.
